Culture

" Corniglia, Roman, probably is the only one of the 5 countries not to be at an altitude of 90 metres a.s.l. sea but to After being owned by the counts of Lavagna and of Luni, passes in the 13th century under Genoa. Together in Vernazza, Manarola, Riomaggiore and Monterosso Cinque Terre are part of UNESCO since 1997. The landscape that distinguishes them, and made them famous throughout the world, are the characteristic terraces or bands, built by stone walls that contain the soil above where it is harvested olives and vines. The commitment of centuries in achieving them and maintain them, allowed to cultivate and live between mountains and sea, in a rough and rugged spit of land. "
